definitely had we space for the mention of officers who have been abused and insulted by Mr. Lincoln, simply because of their political opinions .-Nor has the persecution been confined alone to officers. Soldiers lying sick and wounded in hospitals have been return. The soldiers of New Hampshire and Connecticut have given evidence upon this point which cannot be controverted. Think of it, soldiers in I amfully prepared to cut Threads on Well Tu our armies. You who hate despotism and are fighting to preserve our institutions. You who are abolitionists, imagine yourselves approached by a democratic officer, under such circum-

Our armies have been sacrificed to promete the partisan and personal ends of Mr. Lincoln and his adherents. For this the troops of Seymour in Florida were devoted to slaughter. It was hoped that they might gain so much of the state as would justify an attempt to erect a bogus state government, and thus secure a small electoral vote. Gen. Banks' expedition, ending in the defeat at Pleasant Hill, was a cotton stealing raid; and to-day thousands of our soldiers' lives are exposed in guarding the plantations of ernment lessees, and as appears m a late latter in the New York Tribune, it is a part of the duty of some of our troops to flog refractory

The massacre at Fredericksburg, under Burnside, and at Chancellor-ville under Hooker, were the result of Mr. Lincoln's ignorant self conceit in demanding that his "plan," should have a trial. These were not suffi-Grant was sent on the same route with an army large enough to lose half its number before reaching Petersburg and yet stendily beat back the force of Lee. He could have reached the same position without the loss of a man in battle. The skeletons covering the ground between the Rapidan and James, on the line of Grant's murch, are each one of them witnesswhich Mr. Liucola holds the lives of the soldiers he professes so much to Something might be said of the cheerful hilarity maintained by Mr. Lincoln among the hospitals of Washington, but this subject has lately been presented in a graphic manner by a contleman in Indiana, and we allude to it merely to reproduce a calculation made by him. When the Baltimore convention adjourned, a majority of its members visited Washington to congratulate the president upon the result. He entertained them with amusing anecdotes, and it is estimated that within sight of the windows where the company was congregated, three soldiers died during each one of Mr. Lincoln's laughable recitals. In happy harmony with this was the request for "Picayune Butler," when he was surveying the wounded and corpses on the field of Antietam.

In his heartless jocularity amid scenes of suffering and death; in his useless expeditions for political puroses; in his massacre of soldiers on the overland route; in his vindictive pursuit of officers who were politically opposed to him; in his degradation of white soldiers by placing negroes on an equality with them; in his demand that our armies shall be sacrificed to procure, not the restoration of the nion, but the onfranchisement of negroes,--Mr. Lincoln has proved that e regards our soldiers merely as agencies to accomplish the purposes of mself and his party. Their decimated ranks do not touch a chord in his heart, or awaken a reeling which is not intimately connected with these objects.— Chicago Times.

E Mr. Lincoln is one of those aditional Union men who make the restoration of the Union depend upon the condition that the Southabol-ishes slavery.
